Holy Redeemer named one of Philadelphia Business Journal's Best Places to Work

(PHILADELPHIA, PA) — Philadelphia Business Journal has named Holy Redeemer Health System one of its Best Places to Work in the Philadelphia region. The award recognizes the company's dedication to employee growth and satisfaction, as well as its achievements in creating a positive, energetic and highly motivating work environment.

Says Michael B. Laign, president and CEO, Holy Redeemer Health System: "We have created an environment that contributes to our employees' overall success, and we are very proud of the high-quality, compassionate care that we provide to our patients, residents, and clients. This designation is quite meaningful because it is based upon the feedback of our staff. We work hard at fostering an open, respectful, collaborative, and considerate culture at Holy Redeemer, and our employees clearly recognize that."

Holy Redeemer was one of hundreds evaluated by their employees, securing its position on this prestigious list based on the strength of its employee-related programs and services.

In addition to our very competitive compensation and benefits package, Holy Redeemer offers innovative programs, such as tuition assistance towards a degree from an accredited academic organization; an employee recognition program; and offerings that promote work-life balance such as access to an on-site daycare facility; a credit union; and the Employee Assistance Program and Employee Crisis Fund, which provide help to employees facing personal, professional, and financial issues.

As a health system, many of the inventive programs express an interest in the health and wellness of its employees, such as a totally tobacco-free environment with smoking cessation programs; discounted memberships to the Holy Redeemer Health & Fitness Center; and a daily walking program through the American Heart Association called Start!, which encourages physical activity in the workplace.

“We work at being open and innovative,” says Joseph Cassidy, vice president of Human Resources at Holy Redeemer Health System. “And we’re proud to be recognized by a respected publication for our efforts, by being named one of the Philadelphia Business Journal’s Best Places to Work.”

The awards program was launched by the Philadelphia Business Journal through direct mailings, e-mail and fax announcements, phone calls and advertisements in the paper. The Philadelphia Business Journal’s research partner, Quantum Market Research, tabulated the results of thousands of online surveys completed by employees to establish the rank order. Common themes among top companies focused on work-life balance; respect and caring for employees; recognition of accomplishments; feeling empowered; good teamwork and commitment to community.
